THE GREAT LIQUIDS EVOLUTION

LIQUID BRINE IS MORE PROFITABLE, MORE EFFECTIVE, AND MORE ENVIRONMENTALLY FRIENDLY.

WATER CONTAMINATION

Rock salt contaminates water sources when snow melts, causing health problems, water pipe corrosion, and ecosystem damage.

A 2017 study found that nearly half of a sample of 284 lakes in the Northeast and Midwest have undergone long term salinization.

Rhode Island's water bodies contaminated by salt doubled between 2008 and 2012.

Liquid brine uses up to 70% less salt and sticks to the ground more effectively, helping to prevent water contamination.

SALT USE AND COST

The US spreads 48 billion pounds of salt on roadways every year.

Jefferson County, WI, cut salt use by 60% since switching to brine with no increase in accidents.

Wisconsin's salt use is at a 30-year low after widespread brine adoption.

Liquid brine cuts salt use by up to 70%.

INFRASTRUCTURE

Road salt leaches calcium out of concrete in bridges and roads.

The US spends $5 billion a year on infrastructure damage caused by road salt.

Liquid brine reduces infrastructure damage to roads and bridges.

“I GUARANTEE YOU’LL NEVER TURN BACK.”

Charles Glossop
CSP, Owner of Hantho Outdoor Services

“You need to make the decision to use liquids. If you make that decision, I guarantee you’ll never turn back,” said Charles Glossop, certified snow professional and owner of Hantho Outdoor Services. Hantho Outdoor Services, a $10 million Minneapolis-based company with clients in 14 states, has been using liquid brine for over 35 years. Glossop is also enthusiastic about Camion Ice Master® T-Series truck sprayers. “What we like about the Camion [sprayer] is that it’s all-electric,” Glossop said. “There’s no gas engine; there’s no having to refuel in the middle of a run.” The silent electric motor also enables Hantho Outdoor Services to work in downtown areas without having to worry about violating noise restrictions.
